MUMBAI: About 507 families residing in a posh housing society in Ghatkopar have shelled out ₹10 lakh for water tankers since April 1, and there are still nine days left in this month. If it sounds astounding, then look at their March's expenses that stand at ₹8.5 lakh.

Residents claim that the BMC has, for the last two years, been supplying only 55% of the building's sanctioned quota and the current 15% cut has reduced the overall percentage of supply to 15. As a result, the society had to spend ₹68 lakh to buy water in the last financial year. →P6
